

WORKSHOP FOR STUDENTS AND LECTURERS

CLIL – HE: Content Language Integrated Learning for Higher Education at the Business School (UZ)

17 February 2017

Facultad de Economía y Empresa. Universidad de Zaragoza.

10:15 Opening. Ana Yetano, Vicedean for International Relations

10:30-11:30 Workshop: Creative Thinking and Communication for Business Seminario M6 Vicky Gil, lecturer. Departamento de Filología inglesa y alemana, UZ.

This hands-on workshop will engage participants in critical and creative thinking strategies applied to the world of business. Through a series of guided activities they will discover how creativity can be fostered and applied to their field of expertise while developing their ability to communicate in English.

11:30-12:00 Break

12:00-14:00 CLIL for tertiary education – guiding input and supporting output. SALÓN DE ACTOS Phillip Ball. CLIL materials writer and teacher-trainer

There are two basic issues when teaching (and learning) in a non-native language, particularly at university level where the content is invariably complex. The first is to recognise that the methodology of teacher-fronted transmission mode (lecturing) must be modified to take into account the new conditions. The second is to extend the methodological repertoires of the teachers to include a wider range of delivery formats.

Nevertheless, in both cases, the job of the teacher is to guide input (reading and audio-visual) and to support output (spoken and written). Finally, without output, we cannot know if our students are really benefitting, and neither can they.

14:00-14:15 Closing thoughts

Phil Ball Works as a consultant for the Federation of Basque Schools, based in San Sebastián. He is a CLIL materials writer and teacher-trainer and has been closely involved with the award-winning Basque project, 'Eleanitz'. He has been involved in several European-based CLIL projects, and has written a wide variety of CLIL-based textbooks for the Basque and Spanish social science and English language programmes. He co-designed the new 'CLIL Essentials' online course for the British Council and is the module leader on the MA CLIL degree for NILE in England.

He is the co-author of the new book about CLIL, 'Putting CLIL into Practice' (Oxford University Press 2015) and his CLIL textbook series for the Basque curriculum was nominated for the ELTONS Innovation Award in 2016. ball.philip6@gmail.com

If you would like to attend, register by sending an email with your name, ID number, degree and year to pmur@unizar.es

no later than February, 16th

You can ask for a certificate of attendance